

COURT MAKES RECORD IN SETTLING CASES

AN UNUSUAL NUMBER OF CASES WERE SETTLED WITHOUT TRIAL.

ONE DIVORCE GRANTED TODAY

Present Term Will Be Expensive on Account of Extra Number of Jurors.

A record for settled cases is being made in the circuit court this week and as a result Judge Farrand and the jurors have had an exceptionally easy time. This morning when the case of Buckingham vs. Buckingham was called the attorneys announced that it had been settled, and accordingly the judge excused the jury until tomorrow morning when the Gillette vs. Buckley case comes up. Several of the jurors who reside out about the county were excused for the term.

Divorce Granted.
The only business of importance in the court today was the hearing of the divorce case of Anna Shelton Grimes vs. Arthur Grimes. The decree was granted and the plaintiff was granted the right to resume her maiden name and to all the household goods of the couple.

An Expensive Term.
The present term of court, which is going to be a long one, despite the excellent manner in which Judge Farrand has kept the attorneys moving, is going to be an expensive one to the county, the trial of Ira Mighell which starts Monday, causing much of the extra expense because of the large number of jurors it has been necessary to summon.

Eighty-five veniremen have been summoned to appear next Monday morning and as the jurors are entitled to $3 per day and mileage, until excused, it can be seen that the expense next week will total considerable.

Court Adjourns.
As there were no chancery matters to be taken care of this afternoon, Judge Farrand adjourned court until 9 a. m. tomorrow.

MANY BATH TOWELS STOLEN FROM LINE

WERE THE PROPERTY OF L. W. LOESCHER'S BARBER SHOP.

Between 30 and 40 dirty bath towels were taken from a line at L. W. Loescher's barber shop some time on Tuesday night. The towels, which were of the best Turkish goods, had been hung on a line outside the shop to dry before being sent to the laundry. Mr. Loescher says he has no hard feelings toward a thief who would steal dirty linen, but he is thankful the fellow did not get clean towels.

GRIPS STOLEN FROM STERLING HOTEL

A mysterious theft occurred at the Galt House in Sterling Tuesday when two grips belonging to Edward R. Harvey, a prominent attorney of Washington, D. C., were stolen from a rack in the lobby. Mr. Harvey's name was on each of the grips, one of which was a huge leather portfolio affair, while the other was a black leather double-decker. The grips contained important papers in connection with a case Mr. Harvey is working on, and it is surmised that the attorney may have been followed by some one interested in the case and who had been watching for an opportunity to secure the papers.

HINES IS BROUGHT IN Chicago Lumberman in Stephenson Investigation.

Lieutenant Governor Morris of Wisconsin Tells of Alleged Bribe Fraud.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 18.—Testimony that Senator Stephenson secured his election for the United States senate through the expenditure of $100,000 to members of the Wisconsin legislature, $50,000 of which is alleged to have been contributed by Edward Hines, Chicago lumberman, was given before the senatorial committee by Thomas Morris, lieutenant governor of Wisconsin. Morris testified he had been informed by a Mr. Cook, a partner of Hines, that the deal was put through by Robert J. Shields, who went to Washington just before the Wisconsin legislature met and secured the money from Senator Stephenson.

"Cook told me that a few days before the legislature met to elect a United States senator in 1909, a sum of money approximately $100,000 was placed in the hands of certain men, including Shields," testified Morris. "This money I was told afterward went to the three Democratic members who by absenting themselves on March 4, 1909, assured Stephenson's election."

"Shields went to Washington and told Stephenson it would be impossible to elect him unless he raised a certain sum of money. Shields said Hines, the lumberman, was willing to put up half of the $100,000. An arrangement was agreed upon and the deal put through. Shields afterward demanded $15,000 for putting it through."

"Cook told me all this in a lawyer's office in the Rookery building in Chicago. Cook also said that after the Blaine charges were filed against Senator Stephenson, Mr. Hines went to Stephenson and represented that it would be impossible to elect him because of the charges and suggested that if he put in $50,000 Hines would put in an equal amount and use the money to bring about the election."

"I was told that a former assistant sergeant-at-arms of the senate had told C. H. Crownheart of Superior, Wis., that he had knowledge that part of the money went to the three Democratic members of the assembly who walked out."

MAINE EXPLOSION EXTERNAL

Officer Sent on Mission to Havana Makes Report to Secretary Meyer.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Washington L. Capps, former chief constructor of the navy, has submitted a report to Secretary Meyer tending to corroborate the opinion of the court of inquiry that the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor by an external explosion under the vessel's hull. Mr. Capps was sent to Havana by Secretary Meyer to identify certain portions of the wreckage which has been exposed through the lowering of the water in the cofferdam surrounding the Maine.

While the report will probably be made public, naval officers who have read it say that Mr. Capps confirms the decision of the court of inquiry that the condition of the wreckage leads to the conclusion that the primary explosion was beneath the hull of the Maine at about frame 18.

PREVENT PRISONERS SECURING WEAPONS

SOME NEEDED CHANGES BEING MADE AT COUNTY JAIL.

Sheriff Reid announced this morning that his desire to have the radiators in the county jail set in cement was not brought about by the destructiveness of the prisoners, but by the ease with which the iron standards under each leg of the radiators each standard being about six inches in length, could be removed by desperate prisoners and used as weapons. Mr. Reid stated that since Freeman, the forger, broke the iron leg off a cot the inmates have not destroyed any property, but following the disclosure of Freeman's ability to secure weapons that would be dangerous, an investigation was made, which the officers hope will result in removing any possibility of prisoners securing any kind of weapon.

CHANGE LADIES' DAY TO THURSDAY

NEW ARRANGEMENT AT Y. IS FOR ACCOMMODATION OF THE R. R. M. A.

Ladies' day at the Y. M. C. A. has been changed from Wednesday to Thursday afternoon, and accordingly the women will not meet until tomorrow. The change was made because Wednesday is the most convenient day for the R. R. M. A. boys to visit the association building.

The bowling alleys at the association have been repaired and refinished and are now in the finest possible condition. In fact those who have played there say they are undoubtedly as good as can be found anywhere, and the association officials anticipate they will be very popular this winter. The high score of the season thus far is 215.

The officers will keep him in jail until this evening, when he will either be fined again or ordered out of the city.

RAIN PREVENTS GAME IN PHILA.

REST GIVEN PITCHERS WILL HELP GIANTS' CHANCES IN SERIES.

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.—Special—A heavy rain broke this morning and continued until after 1 o'clock, the time for commencing the fourth game between the Athletics and New York Giants, and accordingly the umpires called the game off, and it will be played tomorrow at Shibe park in this city.

The calling off of the game helps the Giants' chances more than any other one thing, McGrath, with Matthewson beaten Tuesday and Marquard tired after his hard battle, which he lost Monday, was driven to the last ditch for pitchers. Both of standbys were tired from their games and he would have been forced to depend upon Ames, Crandall or Wiltse today. Neither of the three could be counted dependable in the crisis the Giants faced today.

The rain, however, which has caused the postponement of the game comes at the right moment for McGrath. It means that Marquard, with the added day's rest, will be able to go back tomorrow and pitch one of his good games, and that Matthewson will be ready for the game Friday.

KAISER'S MARINES LAND FROM WARSHIPS AT HANKOW AND FIGHT IN STREETS.

REBELS SLAUGHTER MANGHUS

Missionaries Reported Still Safe; Imperial Troops Close to Rebels; Run on the Banks.

REBELS GAIN ADVANTAGE

Hankow, Oct. 18.—Special—A battle was fought today between the imperial troops and the rebels, the result of which was indecisive, the advantage, if any, appearing to be with the rebels.

REBELS TAKE TWO CITIES.

Shanghai, Oct. 18.—Special—It is reported that the rebels have captured both Nanking and Kiuking. The statement is also made that there have been a number of secessions from the government troops.

Berlin, Oct. 18.—The foreign office is informed by an official dispatch from Hankow that landing parties from the German warships Leipzig, Tiger and Vaterland, with the assistance of volunteers from the German residents at Hankow, have been fighting with a Chinese mob in the streets.

Washington, Oct. 18.—The international situation developed by the clash at Hankow, China, between German bluejackets and the Chinese residents threatens to present a serious problem.

During the last few days the foreign gunboats have assembled at Hankow to protect foreign interests. So far the revolutionary movement has been directed entirely against the Manchu dynasty, which has been in control of affairs at Peking. According to information received at the state department, there have been no signs of the anti-foreign sentiment which has marked all previous revolutionary outbreaks. The reason for the landing of German sailors is not known here. The American naval commander at Hankow, Commander Chester M. Knepper, has instructions to co-operate with the foreign naval officers. The state department will take no action until further details have been received. It is not expected here that there will be any foreign intervention in behalf of the Peking government unless foreign interests are endangered.

Rear Admiral J. B. Murdock, commander of the Asiatic squadron, has left Manila on board the cruiser New Orleans for Hankow to resume command of the American naval force there, which consists of the Helena, El Cano, Villalobos and Zampar.

The state department was advised by Edward T. Williams, charge d'affaires of the American legation at Peking, that three Chinese had been executed at Mukden for spreading revolutionary doctrines. There had been no disturbances in that region. No anti-foreign sentiment has developed, he added.

GERMAN IS SENIOR ADMIRAL

He Will Probably Command Foreign Forces at Hankow.

The Japanese admiral, Kiwashima, is now in command of the joint naval forces.

Missionaries Still Unharmed.

London, Oct. 18.—The London Wesleyan mission received a cable from Hankow stating that all the missionaries there and in that neighborhood were still safe.

Manchu women are adopting Chinese dress in order to save their lives. The rebels in the south have been slaughtering all Manchus irrespective of sex.

DUCKS GOING SOUTH.

Local hunters reported quite a flight of ducks yesterday, but that they had left for other parts this morning. There is considerable water in the swamps and ponds south of Dixon and no doubt the best hunting will be found in that section this fall.

The Phidian Art club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. H. Vail. The hostess entertained the company with a planola number, Hungarian Rhapsodies, by Liszt, which was thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. C. H. McKenney then read a very well written paper on The Tower of London and Hampton Court. This tower has played a most important part in the darkest hours of England's life. It has been a prison, fortress, palace and is now a government building, used as a museum and armory, where the guards dressed as of yore, escort the guests through these mighty walls, until one seems to live over again the tragic scenes of the past.

A vote of thanks from the Phidians was tendered Miss Helen McKenney for her fine drawing of the London tower. Though enlarged from a tiny picture it was in fine proportion and proved a great help in the study of the subject.

Hampton Court Palace, built in the 16th century for Henry VIII, was at one time full of treasures of art, but many of these have since been moved to Windsor Castle.

The other paper of the afternoon was prepared by Mrs. J. H. Cleary, and was exceptionally fine, but on account of a death in her family Mrs. Cleary was unable to be present and Mrs. C. G. Smith kindly consented to read it for her. Thomas Britton, the originator of the Chamber Concerts, lived two distinct lives, the one by day and the other by night. In the day he could be seen peddling coal upon the streets of London and in the evening he associated with some of the most learned as well as the wealthiest of his time, nor would he at any time change these habits. His skill on the harpsichord was marvelous and each Thursday evening for 36 years these learned friends gathered at his home, a dingy place over his coal shop, and listened to his music, as well as to the music of many of the greatest artists of his time. It is truly said of him, that he loved art for art's sake.

The usual social hour was then spent with the hostess.

MOST DARING HOLD-UP

Armed Men Rob Patrons of Chicago Poolroom.

Owner, Players and Spectators Lined Up Against the Wall and Relieved of Their Money.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Players and spectators in the poolroom of Frederick Anderson, 2342 West Harrison street, were the victims of an old-fashioned hold-up when three armed robbers made a raid on the place. There were several games going on when the three highwaymen entered. They took convenient positions in the room and at a signal drew their revolvers.

"Up with your hands," commanded the leader, "and line up against the wall in a hurry!"

Cues were dropped with a crash and Anderson and his patrons lined up as ordered. Two of the bandits kept the victims covered while the third searched their pockets. After robbing several he reached Anderson, from whom he took $39 in bills and a diamond valued at $150.

Evidently satisfied by the size of their haul, the bandits backed out, still flourishing their revolvers, without searching the others. The police of the Warren avenue station were notified of the robbery.

The chief appeared as the first police official witness in the "top to bottom" investigation of the police department, inaugurated by the civil service commission to ascertain the extent of affiliation of police officials with gambling and vice.

Psychology of Sleep.

The psychology of sleep is a vast and little explored subject. Sleep deepens to trance, trance to death. Therefore in life, speaking somewhat paradoxically, sleep is most akin to death. Whether the spirit is parted from the body and goes long journeys through space, or whether it is in a state of one long dream, parts of which we are alone conscious of, is a matter for the Society of Psychical Research. Yet many of us have dreamed things, seen things or even spoken and heard things in sleep which we have seen, heard or spoken later on in reality. We can more or less follow the stages up to the final sleep of all, but here we must pause, and with Hamlet, in vain attempt to learn what lies beyond the veil: "And in that sleep of death, what dreams may come!"—London Globe.

A Matter of Economy.

"But why do you wish to have a running account at the department store?" asked the husband. "Do you think it saves you anything?"

"Of course it does, you silly thing. Isn't that just like a man! It saves me more than you can imagine," answered the wife in a breath.

"But what does it save?" "Time. I don't have to stop and ask the price of anything I want to buy."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FAMILY THEATRE

Tonight will be the last opportunity to see Sutton in The Pumpkin Girl. This clever act has been the headliner at the Family theatre the first half of this week and has made an unusual hit with the audiences. "Rube" Sutton is a comedian in every sense of the word and keeps his audience laughing all the time he is on the stage. Bliss & Ross furnish a novelty dancing act that is good and brings out enthusiastic applause from the audiences at each performance. The pictures will be changed tonight.

A LESSON FOR ALL OLYMPIC THEATRE, CHICAGO

What a subtle meaning and what a warning to young men of convivial natures, is that scene in the first act of "The Fortune Hunter," now at the Olympic, when Willie Barlett asks Nat Duncan (Will Deming) to go out and make a night of it, for old times sake. Willie says, "Do you remember the night you took me out and showed me how to play Faro bank, Nat?"

"Yes, I remember, and I remember what a yap we thought my roommate was because he wouldn't come with us"—pointing to Kellogg, who has just been made junior partner in a big Wall street company. "He was my room mate."

In the second act, when Nat Duncan upbraids the druggist's daughter for her short-sightedness in roasting her father, Mr. Deming poses with the broomstick in his hand, sways visibly for a period of three minutes. The swaying is especially noticeable to persons who have seen Thos. W. Ross play that part during its run of 332 performances at the Olympic two seasons ago.

"I am sure she has hypnotized him," whispered one woman to another one night this week, so audibly that the conversation was heard by Mr. Deming on the stage. "I don't think it hypnotism," replied her companion. It's merely a display of a physiological principle. If you think it's hypnotism, you try it your self all alone and you will find that, even braced by a broom handle you will not be able to stand still for more than forty seconds in any given position."

BURNING DAYLIGHT

BY JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY DEARBORN MEYER

"Oh, well," he said, with easy masculine tolerance, "so long as you enjoy it. That's what counts, I suppose; and there's no accounting for taste."

Despite his own superior point of view, he had an idea that she knew a lot, and he experienced a fleeting feeling like that of a barbarian face to face with the evidence of some tremendous culture. To Daylight culture was a worthless thing, and yet, somehow, he was vaguely troubled by a sense that there was more in culture than he imagined.

Again, on her desk, in passing, he noticed a book with which he was familiar. This time he did not stop, for he had recognized the cover. It was a magazine correspondent's book on the Klondike, and he knew that he and his photograph figured in it, and he knew, also, of a certain sensational chapter concerned with a woman's suicide, and with one "To Much Daylight." After that he did not talk with her again about books. He imagined what erroneous conclusions she had drawn from that particular chapter, and it stung him the more in that they were undeserved. He pumped Morrison, the clerk, who had first to vent his personal grievance against Miss Mason before he could tell what little he knew of her.

"She comes from Siskiyou County. She's very nice to work with in the office, of course, but she's rather stuck on herself—exclusive, you know."

"How do you make that out?" Daylight queried.

"Well, she thinks too much of herself to associate with those she works with, in the office here, for instance. She won't have anything to do with a fellow, you see. I've asked her out repeatedly, to the theater and the chutes and such things. But nothing doing." Says she likes plenty of sleep, and can't stay up late, and has to go all the way to Berkeley—that's where she lives. But that's all hot air. She's running with the University boys, that's what she's doing. She needs lots of sleep, and can't go to the theater with me, but she can dance all hours with them. I've heard it pretty straight that she goes to all their hops and such things. Rather stylish and high-toned for a stenographer, I'd say. And she keeps a horse, too. She rides astride all over those hills out there. I saw her one Sunday myself. Oh, she's a high-flyer, and I wonder how she does it. Sixty-five a month don't go far. Then she has a sick brother, too."

"Live with her people?" Daylight asked.

"No; hasn't got any. They were well to do, I've heard. They must have been, or that brother or hers couldn't have gone to the University of California. Her father had a big cattle-ranch, but he got to fooling with mines or something, and went broke before he died. Her mother died long before that. Her brother must cost a lot of money. He was a husky once, played football, was great on hunting and being out in the mountains and such things. He got his accident breaking horses, and then rheumatism or something got into him. One leg is shorter than the other, and withered up some. He has to walk on crutches. I saw her out with him once—crossing the ferry. The doctors have been experimenting on him for years, and he's in the French Hospital now, I think."

All of which side-lights on Miss Mason went to increase Daylight's interest in her. Yet, much as he desired, he failed to get acquainted with her. He had thoughts of asking her to luncheon, but his was the innate chivalry of the frontiersman, and the thoughts never came to anything. He knew a self-respecting, square-dealing man was not supposed to take his stenographer to luncheon. Such things did happen, he knew, for he heard the chaffing gossip of the club; but he did not think much of such men and felt sorry for the girls.

CHAPTER XI.

Daylight was in the thick of his spectacular and intensely bitter fight with the Coastwise Steam Navigation Company, and the Hawaiian, Nicaraguan, and Pacific-Mexican Steamship Company were tied up completely. The expenses of combating the strike were tremendous, and they were earning nothing, while daily the situation went from bad to worse, until "peace at any price" became the cry. And still there was no peace, until Daylight and his allies played out their hand, raked in the winnings, and allowed a goodly portion of a continent to resume business.

Daylight's coming to civilization had not improved him. True, he wore better clothes, had learned slightly better manners, and spoke better English. But he had hardened, and at the expense of his old-time, whole-souled geniality. Even his human affiliations were descending. Playing alone hand, contemptuous of most of the men with whom he played, lacking in sympathy or understanding of them, and certainly independent of them, he found little in common with those to be encountered, say at the Alta-Pacific. In point of fact, when the battle with the steamship companies was at its height and his raid was inflicting incalculable damage on all business interests, he had been asked to resign from the Alta-Pacific. The idea had been rather to his liking, and he had found new quarters in clubs like the Riverside, organized and practically maintained by the city bosses.

One week-end, feeling heavy and depressed and tired of the city and its ways, he obeyed the impulse of a whim that was later to play an important part in his life. The desire to get out of the city for a whiff of country air and for a change of scene was the cause. Yet, to himself, he made the excuse of going to Glen Ellen for the purpose of inspecting a brickyard which Holdsworth had sold him. He spent the night in the little country hotel, and on Sunday morning, astride a saddle horse rented from the Glen Ellen butcher, rode out of the village. The brickyard was close at hand on the flat beside the Sonoma Creek.

Resolving to have his fun first, and to look over the brickyard afterward, he rode up the hill, prospecting for a way across country to get to the knolls. He left the country road at the first gate he came to and entered through a hayfield. The grain was waist-high on either side the wagon-road, and he sniffed the warm aroma of it with delighted nostrils. At the base of the knolls he encountered a tumble-down stake-and-rider fence.

He tethered the horse and wandered on foot among the knolls. Their tops were crowned with century-old spruce trees, and their sides clothed with oaks and madroños and native holly. But to the perfect redwoods belonged the small but deep canyon that threaded its way among the knolls. Here he found no passage out for his horse, and leading the animal, he forced his way up the hillside. On the crest he came through an amazing thicket of velvet-trunked young madroños, and emerged on an open hillside that led down into a tiny valley. The sunshine was at first dazzling in its brightness, and he paused and rested, for he was panting from the exertion. Not of old had he known shortness of breath such as this, and muscles that so easily tired at a stiff climb. A tiny stream ran down the tiny valley through a tiny meadow that was carpeted knee-high with grass and blue and white nonpareils.

Crossing the stream, Daylight followed a faint cattle trail over a low, rocky hill and through a wine-wooded forest of manzanita, and emerged upon another tiny valley, down which filtered another spring-fed, meadow-bordered streamlet.

"It sure beats country places and bungalows at Menlo Park," he murmured aloud; "and if ever I get the hankering for country life, it's me for this every time."

An old wood-road led him to a clearing, where a dozen acres of grapes grew on vine-rods. A cow-path, more trees and thickets, and he dropped down a hillside to the southeast exposure. Here, poised above a big forested canyon, and looking out upon Sonoma Valley, was a small farmhouse. With its barn and outhouses it snuggled into a nook in the hillside, which protected it from the west and north. It was the erosion from this hillside, he judged, that had formed the little level stretch of vegetable garden. The soil was fat and black, and there was water in plenty, for he saw several faucets running wide open. Forgotten was the brickyard. Nobody was at home, but Daylight dismounted and ranged the vegetable garden, eating strawberries and green peas, inspecting the old adobe barn and rusty plow and harrow, and rolling and smoking cigarettes while he watched the antics of several broods of young chicks and the mother hens.

Nothing could satisfy his holiday spirit now but the ascent of Sonoma Mountain. And here on the crest, three hours afterward, he emerged, tired and sweaty, garments torn and face and hands scratched, but with sparkling eyes and an unwonted zestfulness of expression. He felt the illicit pleasure of a schoolboy playing truant. The big gaming table of San Francisco seemed very far away. But there was more than illicit pleasure in his mood. It was as though he were going through a sort of cleansing bath. No room here for all the sordidness, meanness and viciousness that filled the dirty pool of city existence. He was loath to depart, and it was not for an hour that he was able to tear himself away and take the descent of the mountain. back at the wooded knolls.

Daylight cast about for a trail, and found one leading down the side opposite to his ascent. Circling the base of the knoll, he picked up with his horse and rode on to the farmhouse. Smoke was rising from the chimney, and he was quickly in conversation with a nervous, slender young man, who, he learned, was only a tenant on the ranch. How large was it? A matter of one hundred and eighty acres, though it seemed much larger. This was because it was so irregularly shaped. Yes, it included the clay-pit and all the knolls, and its boundary that ran along the big canyon was over a mile long. Oh, yes, he and his wife managed to scratch through the sunset light. He was certainly going some for eighty-four. The thought of following his example entered Daylight's mind, but the big game of San Francisco vetoed the idea.

PASSES THROUGH A FLOWER LAND

Taft Special Traverses Lovely Southern California.

TRIBUTE OF FRUIT AND FLOWER

President Makes His Longest Jump, from Los Angeles to Butte, Mont., 1,215 Miles — Greeted by Crowds at Many Stations.

San Bernardino, Cal., Oct. 18.—President Taft passed through the picture book land of southern California.

He is taking the longest jump of his 13,000 mile rip from Los Angeles, Cal., to Butte, Mont., a distance of 1,215 miles, or farther than from Maine to Florida. There were no scheduled stops for this trip, but many small towns along the way telegraphed the president to stop with them a few minutes and he consented to do so.

The last place which the president visited before leaving Los Angeles was Long Beach, where he walked about the hotel plaza and watched the bathers fight the surf of the Pacific and lolled about the warm sand of the beach in the sun.

The first stage of the long jump was through the orange and lemon land of the southern valley. Stops were made at four or five towns during the afternoon and the president spoke to the crowds from the platform of his car. The heat increased as the journey progressed inland. The people at the stations were dressed mostly in white and they buried his platform in roses several times. Every nook of the Taft special, at least, had the freshness of those flowers for the hot dusty trip over the deserts of Nevada and Utah.

They gave their tribute of fruits, also. After the train had run for miles and miles through orchards of lemon and orange trees the Taft special arrived at Ponona, Cal., and there a delegation of the local body of Elks was waiting for the president with a huge basket of lemons decorated with a plea for the maintenance of the citrus fruit tariff.

The president was greeted by amazingly big crowds for the size of the towns. It was evident that they had come in from the ranches and surrounding country to see him. Though the visits were short and rather hastily arranged, considerable preparation had been made at every town for the president's reception and everywhere there were baskets of roses, flowers arranged in designs and little poems handed to the president from the hands of youngsters lifted up to the platform by their parents.

TAFT WRITES ON PEACE

His Message to Public Presented Through a Woman's Magazine.

New York, Oct. 18.—President Taft has written for the November number of the Woman's Home Companion an article entitled "The Dawn of World Peace," in which he discusses the new arbitration treaties, the objections to them and their advantages.

He says that the treaties recently negotiated by the United States with Great Britain and France should commend themselves to the American people, for "they lift into the realm of discussion and hearing, before some kind of a tribunal, many of the causes of war which have made history such a sickening chronicle of ravage and cruelty, bloodshed and desolation."

DISTILLERY FIRE IN PEORIA

Feed House in Ruins, a Fireman Hurt and Loss of $100,000.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 18.—The feed house of the Atlas distillery, belonging to the United States Industrial Alcohol company, was destroyed by fire.

The building was four stories, about 200 feet square, and its walls crumbled within fifteen minutes after the first alarm was sounded. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Fireman John Wenzell was badly injured by being thrown from a fire truck.

Two Hatfields Slain in Feud.

Columbus, O., Oct. 18.—Special dispatches received here say that Troy and Elias Hatfield, two of the Hatfield family of feudists, living near Fayetteville, W. Va., were killed, and another man—Geremie, an Italian—are believed to have been killed as the result of the battle brought on by the old time enmity.

Speed Trial of McNamara.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 18.—With two talesmen temporarily passed by the defense and a third under examination, the murder trial of James B. McNamara went forward with considerable speed. Counsel and talesmen alike seemed relieved by the prospect of rapid work.

SEE THE FUNNY SIDE.

Use Your Sense of Humor When Distressing Situations Arise.

Humor proves to be the saving clause of many a distressing situation. The trouble with most of us is that we take our troubles altogether too seriously. We fail to see the funny side of things that for the moment concern us, even though we are quick to grasp it when we are mere on-lookers.

In the face of gathered clouds that seem to shut out the sunshine forever it is not a bad idea to remind ourselves that this old mother earth has been revolving on her axis for countless ages, that generations of men have come and gone for thousands of years and that the march of human progress has gone right along in the forward direction despite what seemed to be occasional setbacks.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you." There is humor in nearly every situation if we can only see it from the right angle. Those of us who try to smile in adversity and think how much more laughable it would be if conditions were reversed at least feel less uncomfortable over it and take pleasure in looking forward to the time when the shoe will be on the other foot.—Omaha Beg.

The Road to Thrones.

In the year 1716 a girl called Marie d'Abbadie was hired as a servant in an inn at Pierrefitte, France. She was the daughter of peasants named Dominique Habas and Marie d'Abbadie. A Beauvais from the village of Boellh, whose name was Jean de Saint-Jean, stayed in this inn, saw the pretty maid, fell in love with her and on May 30, 1719, wedded her in the church at Assat. They had several daughters, the eldest of whom on Feb. 20, 1754, was married at Boellh to Henri Bernadotte, physician, son of Jean Bernadotte, master tailor. Their son was Napoleon's Marshal Bernadotte, who became king of Sweden and whose great-grandsons and great-granddaughters are respectively King Gustave V. of Sweden, King Haakon VII. of Norway and the Queen of Denmark.

Bedlam.

How many people use the expression "a regular bedlam" without knowing bedlam's "where or what." Bedlam was the popular corruption of Bethlehem, the name of an insane asylum in London, first established in 1523. Owing to the prevalent ignorance of that age, it was a place of chains and manacles and stocks and finally became so filthy and loathsome that no man could enter it. It was rebuilt several times, but even as late as 1812 the institution was marked by its cruelty to inmates. The poor lunatics were chained and flogged at certain stages of the moon's arc. Treacherous floors were arranged that, slipping suddenly, precipitated the unsuspecting ones into "baths of surprise."

BIRTH OF A HYMN.

How Dr. Bennett Came to Write "The Sweet By and By."

The popular hymn, "The Sweet By and By," was written by Dr. S. P. Bennett at Elkhorn, Wis., in 1867, especially for "The Signet Ring," a book of hymns of which he is said to have written more than a hundred. At that time Bennett was associated with J. P. Webster, the composer, who had an exceedingly melancholy disposition. One day Bennett remarked to Webster, "Well, what's the matter now?" "It's no matter," dolefully replied Webster. "It will be all right by and by."

Bennett at once seized his pen and wrote the immortal words of the song. Webster, his gloom vanished, wrote out a few notes and played them on his violin, and these two, with N. H. Carswell and S. E. Bright, were singing the hymn within half an hour from the time Bennett began writing. R. R. Crosby, who entered at the moment, exclaimed, "That hymn is immortal!"

Bennett was born at Eden, N. Y., in 1834. He resigned his position as editor of the Independent at Elkhorn to enter the war between the states and at the end of his service studied medicine and engaged in the drug business at Elkhorn till he became associated with Webster in song writing. He died at Richmond, Ill., in 1898. —New York Tribune.

The Argan Tree.

Among the most remarkable trees of the world is the argan, which abounds in southern Morocco, but is seldom seen elsewhere. A "forest" of argans has a curious scattered appearance because the trees grow singly and far apart. They are very leafy, but seldom exceed twenty feet in height. The branches put out horizontally and begin a yard above the ground. Sheep, cattle and camels feed on the leaves, and goats will stand on their hind legs to reach them, but horses and mules refuse to touch them. The wood is very hard and extremely useful to the natives, who make charcoal from it. The fruit, resembling a large olive, is used to feed cattle and to manufacture a valuable oil. It also furnishes the principal sustenance of many of the poorer natives. —Scientific American.

First Veterinary School.

As nearly as the facts can be got at the first veterinary school was founded in the city of Lyons, France, about the middle of May of the year 1761. Since 1791 veterinary schools have spread all over the civilized world, especially in Germany, France, England and the United States of America, in which advanced countries the horse has the benefit of as fine a science as that which exists for his maintenance. —New York American.

Fifty Years Ago Today. Oct. 18.

William I. of Prussia and Queen Augusta were crowned at Königsberg.
Army circles were interested in the report that Brevet Lieutenant General Winfield Scott had made up his mind to retire, which he did on Oct. 31, writing Secretary of War Cameron that infirmities obliged him to take the step. The impression prevailed that the unfriendly relations between General Scott and General George B. McClellan, whom President Lincoln immediately appointed as General Scott's successor, had much to do with General Scott's resolve to leave the army.

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Fighting Off Lockjaw.

The six cardinal points in the treatment of every blank cartridge wound injury or puncture wound of any kind, says an eminent authority, are the following:

First.—Freely incise every wound.

Second.—Carefully and thoroughly remove from the wound every particle of foreign matter.

Third.—Fertilize the wound with a 25 per cent solution of carbolic acid.

Fourth.—Apply a loose, wet, boric acid pack.

Fifth.—Inject subcutaneously anti-tetanic serum.

Sixth.—In no case should the wound be closed. It should be allowed to heal by granulation from the bottom up. The dressing and packing should be removed every day.

In a family having a member possessing ordinary common sense and proper coolness, he adds, all except No. 5 of these directions can easily and safely be carried out without the aid of a physician. It is the early immediate treatment that is essential, so every second is precious. Of course the physician will be called at the earliest possible moment, and he will apply the serum treatment. The symptoms of tetanus, or lockjaw, start from five to fifteen days from the time of the wound.

SITUATION IN CHINA DESCRIBED

BISHOP BASEFORD OF METHODIST CHURCH WRITES FROM MISSION FIELD.

SEEK PROVINCIAL INDEPENDENCE

Uprising Is General Throughout Empire—Word Received From Joseph Beech.

The dispatches in this paper each evening are giving a very clear idea of the situation in China, which is apparently undergoing a transition through the popular revolt against a bad government. The dispatches each evening are particularly interesting in throwing light upon the situation.

There is also local interest in a letter sent by Bishop Bashford, in charge of the mission work for the Methodist Episcopal church in West China, in which he quotes a dispatch he received from Joseph Beech, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Decker of this city. Bishop Bashford wrote the letter under date of Sept. 11 to Dr. Stuntz at the Mission rooms in New York. In his letter the bishop says:

When I reached Peking on Saturday evening, Sept. 2 on the way from the depot I heard rumors of uprising in Chengtu from the opposition of the people in the nationalization of the railways. * * * There was nothing I could do except to telegraph to Joseph Beech at Chengtu, asking him to inform us of the situation. Tuesday morning at 1 o'clock a messenger awoke me and delivered the following from Chengtu:

"Viceroy thinks it unwise to leave. Everything possible is being done to protect us. Our work abandoned for the present. Taxes' headquarters in several places have been destroyed. Officials have resigned. Everything is at a standstill. The result is very uncertain. Notify Associated Press."

At 11:30 Tuesday night I received the following additional telegram:

"Viceroy orders foreigners to go as quickly as possible to Canadian Methodist Mission. Must obey."

Friday night at midnight I was again awakened and received the following telegram from Dr. J. H. McCarty of Chungking, sent at 4:25 Friday afternoon:

"Foreigners have been ordered to leave Chengtu for fear of local rebellion."

I have every hope, Bishop Bashford continues, that the party will successfully reach Chungking. I still have much confidence in Chao Er Feng (viceroy of Szechwan Province). He and his brother have shown by the firmness with which they have handled the opium situation in Szechwan that they are men of principle and courage. Chao Er Feng will do all in his power to preserve the lives of the foreigners and to preserve the peace in the province. Nevertheless, the conditions which confront China today are very serious. Yuan, Shih Kai in the months preceding his retirement from office was engaged in an earnest struggle for the extension and nationalization of the railways of China. This step is absolutely essential to the transformation of China from a heterogeneous group of semi-independent provinces into a real empire or nation. It is the same transition which took place, accompanied with considerable bloodshed, in the transformation of the American States into the American nation; in the transformation of the independent nation of Italy and Germany, under Cavour, into the kingdom of Italy and under Bismarck into the German empire. If China does not make this transition and become a real nation, she will fall a prey to strong powers which are seeking to seize portions of her territory.

The efforts of the Prince Regent, therefore, toward the nationalization of the provinces seem to me to be the essential to the future welfare or exaltation of the empire. On the other hand, one can readily understand how tenaciously provinces will cling to authority which they have exercised for five hundred or one thousand years. Just now matters are more seriously complicated by the terrible floods in the Yangtze valley, which are sure to be followed by famine and uprising of the starving people clamoring for food. Unfortunately, I am assured that the native press throughout the empire is overwhelmingly in favor of provincial independence and against the Prince Regent and the national policy. But the Chinese have a marvelous faculty of reaching a compromise and finding a way out of the darkest situations, and there is hope that they may find a solution of this problem.

THE OLD TIME DOCTOR.

His Hardships Were Many, and His Rewards Were Not Great.

The strongest impression gained in reading of the experiences of old time physicians is of their boldness and daring. Most of them were by necessity surgeons as well as doctors of medicine. Isolated often from other members of their profession and obliged to bear the entire responsibility of the welfare of their patients, they learned to rely upon themselves and to take chances that would make the general practitioner shudder in these days of many specialists and wide division of labor. Perhaps none ever undertook surgical operations who had no training in that line, but with no hospitals within reach, with few instruments and with the modern antiseptics and nursing systems undreamed of, they ventured to use the knife in critical cases and, as it appears, with a large measure of success.

They were faithful, hardworking servants of the public in the early day. They traveled by horseback over trails that took them through forests and swamps and across streams. Their field of practice often included a large territory, and they were necessarily out in all sorts of weather and encountered hardships of various kinds. Nor were the rewards great. Few of those old time doctors accumulated wealth, some of them not even a competence for old age. But it is easy to see that they were a force in the community and had much to do with the general development of the state.—Indianapolis Star.

"Yes, that's what I said," replied his better half.

"And you hadn't sense enough to see that it was a barefaced swindle!" roared Sillius. "Well, your money's gone now, and you have nothing to show for it."

"Why, yes, I have, John," said his wife. "I have the man's receipt for the money." —Lippincott's.

ABOMINABLE LITERATURE.

Polo Press: Dodgers were being circulated on Monday evening from the Polo news stand from one of the Chicago papers, announcing that that paper is publishing the life of Dr. Harry Webster as written by himself. This is an announcement made for the purpose of getting more readers for that paper. What motive can a Chicago paper have in holding out such an inducement to get additional readers other than for the money in it? Talk about the influence of the press. If all newspapers in the world were to be backed by such low debased beings what would the world be? Harry Webster and any other man behind the bars are gentlemen compared with these unprincipled fellows who would hold forth the life of Webster to be read. Talk about reform advocated by the Chicago dailies, there will never be much reform as long as they remain so rotten through and through.

WRITES OF BEAUTY OF CHELAN LAKE

DR. SICKELS DESCRIBES TRIP HE SAYS HE WILL NEVER FORGET

TRIP OF 100 MILES IN LAUNCH

Towering Mountains and Dashing Cascades Ever Present Companions of Tourists.

Chelan, Wash.,

Oct. 11, 1911.

Editor Evening Telegraph:

We finally got our bear after a lot of hard work. Since coming out of the mountains we have learned of half a dozen places where we could have easily obtained a dozen or so bear. However, we are satisfied. But it was not my intention to write of the hunt, but to give you a description of a trip up Lake Chelan—without doubt, the most beautiful lake in America. We left Wenatchee at 5 a. m., and took a boat on the Columbia, formerly called the Oregon river. The boat is a duplicate of the Mississippi river boats on a slightly reduced scale. The service is excellent and the culinary department is unsurpassed.

During the entire 15 miles we were treated to a fair sample of swift water navigation. The river is perhaps one-quarter mile wide and extremely rapid. In numerous places the boat would have to be "lined up" over the rapids. The ride is beautiful as the river is clear as crystal and runs through a canyon the greater part of the way. Having arrived at Chelan Falls, we took a stage for a trip of four and one-half miles over the divide to Chelan. This ride is the only disagreeable feature of the entire trip on account of the dust. One must simply "forget the ride" stage, and the remainder of the trip will be a pleasure never to be forgotten.

Arriving at Chelan we found the lake boats running on an every alternate day schedule so we chartered a launch for the trip. The launch was owned by Joseph Hendricks, a former Sterling, Ill., boy. We expected to make the round trip of the lake, 194 miles, in a day but we encountered a bad gale, and it took an entire day to run the 57 miles. The launch was small and the lake very rough, in fact the captain of the "down" boat advised us not to attempt the last 25 miles but our captain was game, so we proceeded. We were obliged frequently to pump the water out of the launch and we were a cold and wet crowd when we reached Stehekin, at the head of Chelan, after a fourteen hours' steady run against wind and waves. But the beauties of the lake amply repaid us for the trip. Lake Chelan is 52 miles long and from three-quarters of a mile to two and one-half miles wide. It is almost ice cold and the clearest and bluest water I have ever seen. When the lake is quiet one can see the bottom at a depth of 25 to 30 feet. The lake is very deep in several places, a line 1,500 feet "alling to find bottom; but it is the mountain scenery the entire distance which is the chief attraction.

Beginning with the lower hills at the lower end of the lake, we find the high mountains before we have gone 25 miles. During the last half of the distance we have on either side, the Cascade mountains rising abruptly from the water to a distance of 7,000 or 8,000 feet. The mountains are unusually rough and picturesque. Evidence of their volcanic origin is shown by the crest of the range. Glaciers are rarely out of sight, and the numerous streams falling in cascades from the melting snow form a sight never to be forgotten. Many persons who have visited Europe, say that there is nothing in Switzerland or the Alps which will compare at all favorably with the Chelan scenery. In fact, part of the Cascades is often spoken of as the Alps of America. But the greatest surprise awaits us when we have reached Stehekin, the head of the lake. For the last 25 miles we have been absolutely in the wilds; no sign of civilization except an occasional miner's claim.

A bend in the lake brings us in sight of a large hotel, most beautifully situated at the extreme end of the lake. The mountains tower on all sides and glaciers are always in sight. We are greeted by the genial and most congenial proprietor, M. E. Field, and at once feel that we are home again. This hotel is really a village in itself. Mr. Field has rooms for 150 guests. There are a dozen rooms with bath arranged both singly and en suite. He brings his water through pipes from his spring a mile distant in the mountains. The power from this water saws his wood, runs his butter, operates his laundry and generates power for almost every labor saving device known. With this same water he supplies his lawn with numerous fountains and irrigates an extensive garden from which he furnished his table with every sort of fresh vegetable and strawberries and raspberries in season. The change to thick Jersey cream after using the condensed variety serve everywhere in this country, was most welcome. A visit to the large stables disclosed 100 horses, devoted exclusively to the accommodation of his guests. He furnishes saddle and pack outfits to the numerous points of interest as well as for hunting and prospecting parties.

Just think of it, 100 miles from a railroad, away up in the tops of the mountains to find such a home as this and prices only such as are charged by the ordinary country hotels.

Here at the head of Chelan is found, doubtless, the finest trout fishing in the world, both the cut-throat and Dolly Varden trout being in abundance. In Domkh Lake, one mile distant, are found in profusion the steel head trout, famed for their size and fighting ability. Game of all kinds is found in profusion in the nearby mountains. This is truly a sportsman's paradise. One can come here and avoid the heat of the summer and regain his health in the pure atmosphere. One party told me that Chelan was really the Fountain of Immortal Youth so long sought by Ponce de Leon. However that may be, I can vouch for the fact that one rarely ever meets an old person in this valley. Every person appears young and full of life and energy.

DEMENT TOWN DOINGS

Yes. (In ans. to yesterday's question).

Eph Horner's offer to have that pair of shoes half-soled will have him working like a shoe factory if he makes good. For instance this communication received this a. m.: Doings—I'll leave those shoes on the Lutheran church steps tonight. Mr. H. can get them tomorrow morning, have them repaired and leave them there for me during the day, E. C.

Fringe is now in style. How thankful some of us would be if it would only apply to gentlemen's trousers. Also how stylish we could become.

We have before us a query asking the name of the man who said: "Thank God, I'm not like other men." We've forgotten the gink's name, but believe it was a bachelor. Many a man grows his first beard because his wife made him a present of some fancy ties.

Close the Gates.

Over in Sterling Mrs. Bridget O'Reilly died recently. Now the distinguishing thing about Mrs. O'Reilly lay in the fact that she was the wife of a henpecked man. And O'Reilly was as unforgiving as he was henpecked. He refused to forgive her, even when Bridget was called into the great beyond. He refused to have anything to do with the funeral or even to go to the cemetery. All of the arrangements were looked after by the neighbors. When they had arranged the house they got O'Reilly's consent to come in and look over the floral offerings of the friends. Then they asked him if there was anything further they could do before they took their leave. Still regarding the floral pieces suspiciously, O'Reilly nodded and observed: "If yez don't mind, yez might close thim 'Gates of Ajar'."

Goose Hollow Notes.

Abe Renfrew's wife has quit him and now he is liable to be pinched for having no visible means of support.

There is some talk of startin' a movin' picture show in our midst and the drama is lookin' up considerable. There hasn't been a show since the magic lantern lecture on the Catacombs of Rome by some stranger from away. Wm. Tibbits refused to go sayin' it must be a fake as nobody ever combed a cat.

Smokin' and chewin' has been forbidden at the meetin' house durin' service and Hank Purdy say this reform wave which is sweepin' over the country is certainly fierce and personal liberty is goin' to be a dead letter.

Hi Huggins says he has got the rheumatiz, jumpin' pneumonia, lum bago and shingles and two of his cows has died, the mortgage has been foreclosed on his west forty, his well has gone dry, his two kids has got the measles, his corncrib burned up, his oldest son is in jail and his wife eloped with a travelin' man, but outside of that he is gettin' along fair to middlin'.

Walking Menagerie.

A fashion note says that belts, gloves and neckties of rattlesnake skin will be worn a great deal by women this winter. We knew the poor rattle snake would come to it sooner or later. It was about the only varmint left that women didn't wear. Think of a woman being arrayed in a silk worm dress, seal skin saque, ostrich feather hat, goat skin shoes, whale bone stays, kid skin gloves, horse hide belt, tortoise shell comb, fish scale trimmings, stuffed canary birds, clam shell buttons, Spitz dog muff, camels hair underwear, mind tail collar, alligator hide purse, and now a rattle snake necktie. Solomon in all his glory wasn't such a menagerie as one of these—and yet we love them, no matter what they wear.

NAPOLEON AND SUICIDE.

His Draft of Poison and His Comments on Self Destruction.

It is said that when all seemed lost to Napoleon in 1814—the year before Waterloo—he thought of suicide as an end to his career. He actually took a draft of poison, but the essential element in the concoction had lost its efficacy. He, however, conquered his inclination to self destruction, which he ever afterward held in abhorrence, even during his hopeless exile at St. Helena. When during his first consulship one of his grenadiers killed himself Napoleon issued an order to the guards:

"The Grenadier Gobain has killed himself owing to a love affair. He was otherwise an excellent soldier. The first consul commands that the guards should be informed that a soldier ought to conquer the grief and bitterness of his passions; that there is the same courage in enduring with patience the pangs of the soul as in facing bravely the fire of a battery. To give oneself up to grief without resistance or to kill oneself to escape is to abandon the field of battle before being beaten."

In a conversation with Goethe, Napoleon blamed the poet for allowing Werther to commit suicide, and in 1816 he said to O'Meara:

"Suicide is the act of a gambler who has lost everything or of a ruined prodigal. I have always thought that a man shows more courage in supporting the evils that afflict him than in getting rid of his life."

TRAGIC IN ITS BREVITY.

The Story of the Duel Between Hamilton and Burr.

The story of the Hamilton-Burr duel is tragic in its brevity. The little party of five—the principals, their seconds and the surgeon—was on the ground not long after sunrise. The preliminaries were soon arranged. As Pendleton, Hamilton's second, gave him his pistol he asked, "Will you have the hairspring set?"

"Not this time," was the significant reply, and then the men faced each other.

According to the best authorities upon a disputed subject, Burr fired at the word. At the report Hamilton started forward with a convulsive movement, reeled, involuntarily discharging his pistol into the foliage above him, and fell headlong. Burr, with an expression of pain upon his face, sprang toward him, but Van Ness, his second, seized him by the arm and hurried him down the bank and into their boat.

Hamilton, being lifted up, revived for a moment and gasped, "This is a mortal wound, doctor." Relapsing again into unconsciousness, he was again revived by the fresh air of the river. "Pendleton knows," he said, trying to turn toward his friends, "that I did not intend to fire at him."

At 2 the afternoon following he had breathed his last.

The Snake Stone.

In most accounts of snake charming in India the snake stone plays an important part. When the charmer is bitten the stone is applied to the bite and is supposed to aid in his recovery. Writing in the London Field, Lieutenant L. Mackenzie gives some notes on two of these stones, which he had the opportunity of seeing. They were triangular in shape, flat and rounded, with smooth polished black surfaces. They are said to come from the hills of Tibet and to be the solidified saliva of the markhor. This animal is spoken of in Lieutenant Mackenzie's note as the "Persian snake eater." Its saliva is thought to contain an antidote to snake poison. The markhor is a species of wild goat found in India, Tibet and Kashmir.

AIR CURRENTS.

The Forces That Operate to Make the Wind Blow.

In reference to air currents and the reasons why the wind blows the astronomer royal of England explains that air consists of gaseous particles, all trying to get away from one another, and that under certain conditions they can be compelled to come closer together by contraction or forced to fly further apart by expansion. A quart bottle, for example, holds twenty-two grains of air at the temperature of 70 degrees. If the bottle be cooled by surrounding it with ice the air inside contracts. When this occurs more air rushes in through the bottle's neck. The quart of air now weighs more than twenty-two grains. If the bottle be heated the air it contains expands. Its tiny particles fly further asunder, and many of them escape from the bottle altogether. There is still a quart of air, but it weighs much less than the original twenty-two grains.

Now, consider the earth and the sea under the influence of varying degrees of the sun's heat. Where the heat is greatest the air is made lighter and expands. Where the heat is least the air is unexpanded and heavy. Both the hot and the cold air have weight, but the cold, being the heavier, is drawn more effectively down to the ground. In doing so it drives the lighter air up out of its way. Just as a lump of lead dropped into a pail of water forces some of the water upward. If the earth were equally warm at every part and continued at a constant temperature wind could not exist. It "blows" because of heat and gravitation. In other words, air moves from the place where its weight or pressure is most toward the place where its weight or pressure is least.

TRAPPING EAGLES.

The Chinese Get Them With a Baited Net and a Decoy Bird.

Every year, according to an old custom, in the second quarter of the September or October moon, the inhabitants of the Chinese province of Shantung go to Mongolia to hunt the eagles which abound in that region. The hunters march in troops along the roads, carrying on their shoulders long poles from which are suspended their baggage and provisions and on which are perched tame eagles to be used as decoys.

The hunters make use of a large net, spread open on the ground and baited with small dried fishes, in the midst of which is placed a tame eagle. The decoy naturally begins to devour the bait and thus invites its wild cousins to follow its example. When the birds have alighted and are feeding the hunter, from his hiding place two or three hundred yards distant, quickly closes the net by means of cords and thus captures the eagles.

Eagle hunting is very lucrative. The feathers are used in the manufacture of fans and are sold at a high price even in China. There are three sorts—Kiepel, black with white centers; Chema, white spotted with black; Tontsing, half white and half black. Several eagles contribute to the making of a fan, for only a small part of the plumage can be utilized; hence these fans are very costly.

ANIMAL EVOLUTION.

Changes in the Partridges of the Canary Islands.

A remarkable example of the effects of environment and changed conditions of life upon the forms of animals is furnished by a species of partridge living in the Canary Islands. Over 400 years ago the Spaniards introduced the red-legged partridge from Europe into these islands, and the bird has continued to flourish there; but, as recent examination proves, it has undergone modifications clearly brought about by the conditions under which it lives.

Its back has turned from russet color to gray. This looks like protective coloration, since the bird passes its life among gray volcanic rocks. Its beak has become one-fourth longer and thicker than that of its ancestors and of its European relatives, and its legs also have increased in length and grown stouter.

These changes are exactly such as were needed to suit it to the life that it is now compelled to lead amid the rocks and on the mountain sides of the islands, where a more rigorous physical development is required than was needed in its former home. Harper's Weekly.

Her Answer.

He—I am going to make you a present of a bracelet for your birthday. Which do you prefer—silver or gold?

She is silent.

He—Well, which do you want?

She is silent still.

He—Why don't you speak? I ask you which do you prefer—silver or gold?

Then he suddenly remembered that "silence is golden."

WHERE THE BIG CHEESE CAME FROM.

The world's greatest cheese, weight six tons, will be on exhibition at the National Dairy show, Chicago, International amphitheater, Union stockyards, Oct. 26 to Nov. 4. It was made from milk produced by 861 herds, of which the illustration shows the one which was located nearest Appleton, Wis., where the big cheese was made.

STORIES OF ROSSINI.

His Dread of Thirteen and Friday and a Coincidence.

Rossini had scant patience with amateur composers. One such once accompanied the manuscript of his latest composition with a Stilton cheese, of which he knew Rossini to be fond. He hoped of course to have a letter praising his work. A letter came, but all it said was: "Thanks. I like the cheese very much."

When Rossini was rehearsing one of his operas in a small theater in Italy he noticed that the horn was out of tune. "Who is that playing the horn in such an unholy way?" he demanded. "It is I," said a tremulous voice. "Ah, it is you, is it? Well, go right home." It was his own father.

Rossini's whimsicality extended even to his birthday. Having been born on Feb. 29, in leap year, he had of course a birthday only once in four years, and when he was seventy-two he facetiously invited his friends to celebrate his eighteenth birthday.

All his life he had a dread of the number thirteen, as well as of Fridays. He never would invite more than twelve to dinner, and once when he had fourteen he made sure of an understudy who would, at a moment's notice, have been ready to come should one guest have missed. And, though this was a double superstition, he died on Friday, Nov. 13.—New York Sun.

An Unforeseen Calamity.

In his own mind Abel Saunders was a man marked out by destiny for misfortune; in the minds of his neighbors it was a wonder that such a shiftless man got on as well as Abel did. When he appeared at the door of the resident who had ordered a dozen eggs the night before he unfolded a much rumpled paper and took from it four eggs.

"That's all there is left of what I started with," he said lugubriously. "If I had been anybody but me they'd

've got here all right. But the four little holes that was in the bottom of the bag—I saw 'em, but there wasn't any one of 'em half big enough for an egg to come through—if they didn't all join together when I was most over here! If I hadn't 've been as spry as a man like me has to learn to be I couldn't have saved ye a single egg!"—Youth's Companion.

Gave the Tiger His Arm.

The late Sir Edward Bradford was a great figure in British official life, especially in the Indian service. Sir Edward was a splendid huntsman. Although possessing only one arm, he rode a most spirited horse. The occasion on which he lost his left arm furnishes an example of his presence of mind and the cool bravery which were his characteristic traits. He was out after shooting in the jungle when he was knocked down by a tiger. Instead of struggling with the animal, he permitted it to maul his arm so as to let one of his party shoot it.

Her Own Worst Worries.

"You say she worries herself unnecessarily over trifling things?" said one of two women who were speaking about the ways of another. "Worries?" was the answer. "Why, she's more trouble to herself than a family of children!"—New York Sun.

Easy.

Her Choice.

"I believe there's good people in all denominations," Mrs. Lapsling said, "but as for myself I always go to one of the orchard or churches."—Chicago Tribune.

MATHEWSON HIT BY ATHLETICS

New York's Crack Pitcher Is Solved by Philadelphians.

LATTER WIN BY 3 TO 2 SCORE

Day Is Cold and Weather Threatening, but for All that 37,000 Persons Pass Through Turnstiles at Polo Grounds.

New York, Oct. 18.—Eleven innings were required to accomplish the feat, but the Philadelphia Athletics, for the first time, solved the pitching of Christy Mathewson and beat him at the polo grounds.

The score was 3 to 2, the Giants ranking only three hits off Jack Coombs and scoring a run in the last inning. They hung up a tally in the third period and held the advantage until the ninth inning, when Frank Baker, who won Monday's game with a home run, drove one of Matty's aunts far into the right wing of the grandstand for the circuit. This four bagger tied the score and prompted the wildest kind of excitement.

The Giants partially crumbled under the heavy cannonading of the Athletics in the eleventh, when they pounded Matty for three hits, which with errors by Merkle and Herzog, netted two runs, just enough to win, for in the last half Herzog made up for several bungling plays by lining out a two bagger, after which he reached the plate on a fumble by Collins.

Mathewson was found for nine hits, but he was batted much harder than the score indicates. He received magnificent support from Meyers, Doyle and Murray, who helped him out of numerous tight places. Coombs used terrific speed and pitched with wonderful confidence. Meyers and Mathewson hit him safely in the third inning after which the Giants were helpless until Herzog cracked out his double in the final round.

The game was exciting and filled with sensational incidents. Numerous close decisions worked up the players and the crowd, yet the rulings all were eminently fair.

In spite of the cold and threatening weather the attendance almost equaled that of Saturday. The turnstile count showed that 37,216 persons passed through the gates. The gross receipts amounted to $75,593.

WILSON DENIES JACK-POT TALE

Repeats Banquet Explanation of Bathroom Incident.

TWO EXPLANATIONS DIFFER

Variance Between Those of Shepherd and Witness Is Held to Be Significant—Representative Wilson Debonair on Stand.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The Lorimer investigating committee of the United States senate heard Representative Robert E. Wilson, alleged distributor of jack-pot money in the Illinois legislature, deny emphatically all charges against him.

Mr. Wilson was on the witness stand the entire day. Through a long and severe examination he smiled continually and seemed about the happiest man in the room.

Although his explanation of the bathroom incident in the Southern hotel in St. Louis on July 15, 1909, differed from that of any of the other "bathroom boys," he stuck to the story he told before the former senate committee.

He described at considerable length a plan to arrange for a banquet in honor of Lee O'Neill Browne, minority leader in the 1909 session, and of a trip to St. Louis to consult Democratic members from southern Illinois regarding it.

Since the death of Representative Joseph Clark of Vandallia Mr. Wilson is the only person connected with the bathroom incident giving the proposed banquet as the reason for his St. Louis trip. Former Representative Henry A. Shepherd of Jerseyville, who testified before the committee last week, said that he merely chanced to meet Mr. Wilson in St. Louis and that he never knew the purpose of the latter's visit. Mr. Shepherd said that Mr. Wilson told him nothing about a banquet.

Of the six Democratic members of the legislature who are said to have received $900 jack-pot money from Mr. Wilson, Mr. Shepherd is the only one still living who denies he received money.

The confession of Charles A. White led to the confessions of Michael Link, who since has died, and of H. J. C. Beckemeyer. Mr. Beckemeyer testified that Mr. Wilson invented the banquet story a year after the bathroom incident.

Representative Clark, the fifth legislator said to have received money from Wilson, stuck to the banquet story until his death a few months ago.

WIDOW HELD FOR MURDER

Mrs. Stannard Says She Kept Boarders to Pay Husband's Debts.

Ontonagon, Mich., Oct. 18.—In a statement issued following her arraignment on a charge of murdering her husband by administering strychnine in his coffee, Mrs. Charles S. Stannard told of years of privation and hard work during which, by taking boarders, she helped her husband meet debts incurred through his failure in business.

Following a fire which destroyed the store of Stannard Bros. (the firm being composed of the dead man and his brother Asa), Mrs. Stannard charged that Asa collected $8,000 insurance and kept it all.

George Stannard, a brother of the dead man, replied to the widow's charges. He said only $6,000 insurance was collected and it went to pay the debts of the firm.

START TRIAL OF ENRIGHT

Both Sides Accept Jury and Sluggish Fights Murder Charge.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The jury which is to hear the testimony in the trial of Maurice (Moss) Enright, alleged slayer and leader of labor sluggers, was completed in Judge William McSurely's court.

Enright is on trial for the murder of Vincent Altman in the Briggs house bar on March 2. Thirteen days were consumed in securing the jury.

LIGHT ON MURDER OF FIVE

Ellsworth, Kan., Oct. 18.—William Showman, his wife and three small children, whose mutilated bodies were found in their home, were slain by some one who knew the showman home accurately and who was on friendly terms with a family watchdog.

This conclusion was reached by the police after twenty-four hours' investigation.

Elisors Refused Dr. Hyde.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 18.—Judge E. E. Porterfield in the criminal court denied the motion of attorneys for B. C. Hyde for the appointment of elisors to take charge of the jury that is to try Dr. Hyde the second time for the murder of Colonel Thomas H. Swope.
